THE JAPANESE CASES.

Yamamoto Sentenced to Three Months

In the District Court on Saturday morning the Japanese riot cases were brought up.

Morita filed a bond in the sum of $250, conditioned that he will not commit the offense of being a disorderly person by reason of his being a disturber of the peace, within one year from November 4th, and was discharged.

Yamamoto, whose trial on the brought up and his attorneys introduced several witnesses for the def nse

Yoneda, a J. panese made: who lived in the neighborhood of Kaumakapili, testified that she saw the rumpus and saw the police beating the defendant with a c.ub. She saw him beaten over the head and kicked. There were could not identify the police. After he was beaten by the police the defendant went home. He had no weapon or stick of any kind. She saw the occurrence from her residence on Smith street. On cross - examination she could not say that the row started from drinking too much saki or not, but admitted that everybody was indulging freely in that intexicating beverage and that six policemen arrested the defendant.

Kimoshita, who also lives on Smith street, told a different story. He said he saw the defendant during the row and saw the defendant struck on the head by a policeman, who told him to go home. After the policeman left two natives got hold of the defendant, knocked him down and the sticks. He was twenty yards away and could see that the defendant had nothing in his hands. On cross-examination the witness said this occurred fifteen minutes after the row was over and the crowd had dispersed. The two natives who did the beating were not policemen.

In his own behalf the defendant swore that he was walking quietly along the street, when he was struck on the face and knocked down by some one who told him to go home. When he got up five or six policemen twisted his arm behind his back and he was struck on the head, ear and face and his clothing torn. The policeman who beat him was the second witness against him; a short half-Portuguese. It is not true he was assaulted and knew not :he was going to a carpenter shop to see about work, but admitted that the shop was not open at 9:30 p. m. He was positive it was the police who first struck him.

The defendant was found guilty by Judge Perry and sentenced to three months' imprisonment at hard labor with costs. An appeal being taken to the Circuit Court His Honor fixed his bail at $300.
